

Reporting Claims Related to COVID-19

While many infectious diseases contracted on the job are not covered by a standard Workers' Compensation policy, COVID-19 can sometimes present a special case.

As an employer, you are encouraged—and in some states required—to report claims related to COVID-19.

Some employees that contract COVID-19 due to work-related exposure may be eligible for workers' compensation benefits. Eligibility depends on state law and the specific circumstances.

Please report any claims related to the possible contraction of COVID-19 in the workplace. Builders will investigate promptly and determine coverage.

We hope you continue to be safe during these times.
